Reviews

This pdf may be really worth a read, and superior to other. It generally does not price too much. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Father White says that by kindness to the Marylanders, the Governor hoped to recover the more easily from the Royal Treasury a great amount of money due him. (Colonial Papers, p. 208-9; vol. viii. 65; II. Force Whites Relation, p. 140.) No official communication of these transactions appears to have been made by the Virginia authorities to the parent government. If Governor Harvey wrote at all, it was probably to Lord Baltimore, and with a view of making the King so grateful as to pay the arrears of his salary; for, in the previous September, his Lordship made an earnest application to Secretary Windebanke, to procure a letter of thanks from the King to Sir John Harvey, for the assistance he had given to his Maryland plantation, and against Claybourn. Sir John Harvey obtained the royal letter of thanks and Windebankes approval of his conduct, but no money. Windebauke charged him to continue his assistance against Claybourues malicious practices. But previously to this application of Lord Baltimore, Claybourne had been superseded in his place of Secretary of State in Virginia by Kemp, the author of the letter above. His lordship apparently had earlier information from the Colonies than any one else, either by the letters of his own officers or from Sir John Harvey, and had every motive for effecting the removal from office of so obnoxious a person as Claybourne. But the King, with whom the justice and equity...
