In Philadelphia an almost equally spectacular parade was accompanied by the signing in Independence Hall of a pledge of allegiance to the country of their adoption by representatives of thirty nationalities. In South America, several sister nations officially adopted the day as a national holiday. Nation-wide celebration occurred in Great Britain, France, and Italy. Italians joined the names of Garibaldi, Rizzio, and Wilson. Florence conferred the freedom of the city upon President Wilson. Hundreds of thousands saw the New York parade which, from early morning until late afternoon, swept up Fifth Avenue. There had never been such a display in that city. It was called the pageant parade of Independence Day by a Mayor's Committee that had organized it as a demonstration by Americans of foreign birth of their loyalty to their adopted country; but it was more than a pageant, more than a parade, and went further than a mere display of loyalty by citizens born abroad. Observers who had seen great New York parades for forty years said it surpassed them all in brilliancy of color as well as in the variety of races represented. Estimates as to the number of marchers varied, but the general opinion was that from 70,000 to 75,000 were in line. Born in Germany; Made in America, Uncle...
